Tax On Cold Storage Food.

A novel plan to put a crimp in the high cost of table products by taxing food out of cold storage is embodied in a bill which Representative B. F. Welty of Ohio has just introduced in the house of representatives.

The bill provides that staple articles of food held in cold storage shall be taxed on a graded scale, the amount of tax depending on the length of time the food is held in storage.

These taxes are made to apply to beef, pork, veal, sheep, goats, lamb or kid, poultry or game, fish, eggs, butter and the manufactured product of all these articles.

The taxes are heavy, being, for instance, in the case of beef, 10 per cent of the selling price after six months, and less than eight months in storage; 15 per cent after eight months and less than ten months; 20 per cent after ten months and less than twelve months.

The maximum tax in all instances is 30 per cent of the selling price. In case of veal this maximum applies after eight months; in case of lamb or kid, poultry or game and fish, the maximum applies after ten months and in the case of pork, eggs, butter and sheep or goats the maximum is levied after twelve months in storage.

Suffering Described As Torture
Relieved by Black-Draught.

Rossville, Ga.—Mrs. Kate Lee Able, of this place, writes: "My husband is an engineer, and once while lifting, he injured himself with a piece of heavy machinery, across the abdomen. He was so sore he could not bear to press on himself at all, on chest or abdomen. He weighed 165 lbs., and fell off until he weighed 110 lbs., in two weeks."

He became constipated and it looked like he would die. We had three different doctors, yet with all their medicine, his bowels failed to act. He would turn up a ten-cent bottle of castor oil, and drink it two or three days in succession. He did this yet without result. We became desperate, he suffered so. He was swollen terribly. He told me his suffering could only be described as torture.

I sent and bought Thedford's Black-Draught. I made him take a big dose, and when it began to act he fainted, he was in such misery, but he got relief and began to mend at once. He got well, and we both feel he owes his life to Thedford's Black-Draught."

Thedford's Black-Draught will help you to keep fit, ready for the day's work. Try it!

EIGHT CENSUS
chiefs NAMED
FOR KENTUCKY

Appointments in Three Districts—

7, 10—Are Held Up.

Washington, Aug. 5.—Official announcement of eight of the eleven congressional district supervisors of the census was made late today by Secretary of Commerce Redfield.

For reasons unexplained, names of the census supervisors for the First, Seventh and Tenth districts were withheld.

The list of the appointments follow: Second district, Richard Alexander, Calhoun; Third district, Sam H. Penrod, Ennis; Fourth district, George H. Casperle, Brandenburg; Fifth district, Charles L. Barker, Louisville; Sixth district, William C. Ellison, Williamstown; Eighth district, George M. Buchanan, Jr., Shelbyville; Ninth district, H. H. Denham, Vanceburg; Eleventh district, J. N. Meadows, Jamestown.

It is known that Jo Morris, New Castle, Carrollton and Sulphur, secretary to Representative J. Campbell Cantrill, will be the supervisor of the census of the Seventh district and the announcement of his appointment is looked for in a few days.

Just why the names of the census supervisors for the First and Tenth districts are withheld has not been explained by Chief Rogers of the Census Bureau.

The salary for each census supervisor will be $1,500 a year and $1 additional for each other 1,000 or major part of a thousand population. On the basis of the last census the salary of Mr. Barker, the supervisor for Jefferson county, will be about $1,800 a year.

Protection From Live Wires.
For the sure protection of linemen handling live wires a pair of gloves inside and one outside of the rubber gloves have been recommended. The woven fabric inside glove takes up perspiration and shields the rubber from the finger nails and a leather gauntlet over the rubber glove protects from outside mechanical injury, aids in grasping tools and keeps the hands warm in winter.

Origins of Military Titles.

Commodore and commander are former borrowed and corrupted from the Spanish comandador, a knight, a commander, or the superior of a monastery. The French have the word commandeur, the Italian comandatore, commandant, however, meaning the officer of a fortified town's garrison, etc., comes from the medieval Latin commandator, a commander, and commandare, to command.

All Sailors Superstitious.

All sailors are superstitious, but none is so completely under this influence as the old deep-sea fisherman. He puts the deepest faith in "signs" and omens of all kinds. SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Major Amberson had made a fortune in 1873 when other people were losing fortunes, and the most because of the Panic of 1873. Major Amberson laid out a 300-acre "development," with roads and statutory, and in the centre of a four-acre tract, on Amberson avenue, built for himself the most magnificent mansion in the Midland City had ever seen.

CHAPTER II.—When the major's daughter married young Wilbur Minnaf, the neighbors predicted that as Isabel could never really love Wilbur all her love would be bestowed upon the children. This was only partly true, however. George Amberson Minnaf, but his up-bringing and his youthful accomplishments as a mischief maker were quite in keeping with the most pessimistic predictions.

CHAPTER III.—By the time George went away to college he did not attempt to conceal his belief that the Ambersons were about the most important family in the world. At a party given in his honour when he returned from college, George monopolized Lucy Morgan, a stranger and the prettiest girl present, and got on famously with her until he learned that a "tear looking duck" at whom he had been poking much fun was the young Mr. Eugene Morgan, former resident of Biglow, and had been returning there to erect a factory and to build horseless carriages of his own invention.

CHAPTER IV.—Eugene was an old admirer of Isabel's and they had been engaged when Isabel threw him over because of some youthful indiscretion and married Wilbur Minnaf.

CHAPTER V.—George makes rapid progress in his courtship of Lucy.

CHAPTER VI.—While driving with Lucy next day, George allows a horse to get beyond control, and the animal overturns the cutter, spilling George and Lucy in the snow, unharmed, although George is greatly annoyed.

CHAPTER VII.

When George regained some measure of his presence of mind Miss Lucy Morgan's cheek, snowy and cold, was pressing his nose slightly to one side; and a monstrous amount of her fur boa seemed to mingle with an equally unpleasing quantity of snow in his mouth. He was confused, but conscious of no objection to any of these juxtapositions. She was apparently uninjured, for she sat up, batless, her hair down, and said mildly:

"Good heavens!"

Though her father had been under his machine when they passed, he was the first to reach them. He threw himself on his knees beside his daughter, but found her already laughing, and was reassured. "They're all right," he called to Isabel, who was running toward them, ahead of her brother and Fanny Minnaf. "This snowbank's a feather bed—nothing the matter with them at all. Don't look so pale!"

"Good Heavens!"

"Georgie," she gasped, "Georgie!"

George was on his feet, snow all over him.

"Don't make a fuss, mother! Nothing's the matter. That darned silly horse!"

Sudden tears stood in Isabel's eyes. "To see you down underneath—dragging—oh!" Then with shaking hands she began to brush the snow from him.

"Let me alone," he protested. "You'll ruin my gloves. You're getting snow all over you, and—"

"No, no!" she cried. "You'll catch cold; you mustn't catch cold!" And she continued to brush him.

Amberson had brought Lucy's hat; Miss Fanny acted as lady's maid; and both victims of the accident were presently restored to their usual appearance and condition of apparel. In fact, encouraged by the two older gentlemen, the entire party, with one exception, decided that the episode was after all a merry one, and began to laugh about it. But George was glummer than the December twilight now swiftly closing in.

"That darned horse!" he said.

"I wouldn't bother about Pendennis, George," said his uncle. "You can send a man out for what's left of the

"If you're going to decline to dance that cotillion with me simply because you've promised a—a miserable red-headed outsider like Fred Kinney, why we might as well quit!"

"Quit what?"

"You know perfectly well what I mean," he said huskily.

"I don't."

"Well, you ought to!"

"But I don't at all!"

George, thoroughly hurt, and not a little embittered, expressed himself in a short outburst of laughter: "Well, I ought to have seen it!"

"Seen what?"

"That you might turn out to be a girl who'd like a fellow of the red-headed Kinney sort. I ought to have seen it from the first!"

Lucy bore her disgrace lightly. "Oh, dancing a cotillion with a person doesn't mean that you like him—but I don't see anything in particular the matter with Mr. Kinney. What is?"

"I prefer not to discuss it," said George curtly. "He's an enemy of mine."

"Why?"

"I prefer not to discuss it."

"Well, but—"

"I prefer not to discuss it!"

"Very well." She began to hum the air of the song which Mr. George Amberson was now discussing, "O moon of my delight that knows no wane"—and there was no further conversation on the back seat.

The contrivance stopped with a heart-shaking jerk before Isabel's house. The gentlemen jumped down, helping Isabel and Fanny to descend; there were friendly leave takings—and one that was not precisely friendly.

"It's 'au revor' till tonight, isn't it?" Lucy asked, laughing.

"Good afternoon!" said George, and he did not wait, as his relatives did, to see the old sewing machine start briskly down the street, toward the Sharons'; its lighter load consisting now of only Mr. Morgan and his daughter. George went into the house at once.

He found his father reading the evening paper in the library. "Where are your mother and your Aunt Fanny?" Mr. Minnaf inquired, not looking up.

"They're coming," said his son; and, casting himself heavily into a chair, stared at the fire.

His prediction was verified a few moments later; the two ladies came in cheerfully, unfastening their fur cloaks. "It's all right, Georgie," said Isabel. "Your Uncle George called to us that Pendennis got home safely. Put your shoes close to the fire, dear, or else go and change them."

"Look here," said George abruptly. "How about this man Morgan and his old sewing machine? Doesn't he want to get grandfather to put money into it? Isn't he trying to work Uncle George for that? Isn't that what he's up to?"

It was Miss Fanny who responded. "You little silly!" she cried, with surprising sharpness. "What on earth are you talking about? Eugene Morgan's perfectly able to finance his own inventions these days."

"He strikes me as that sort man," George answered doggedly. "Isn't he, father?"

Minnaf set down his paper for the moment. "He was a fairly wild young fellow twenty years ago," he said, glancing at his wife absently. "He was like you in one thing, Georgie: he spent too much money—only he didn't have any mother to get money out of a grandfather for him, so he was usually in debt. But I believe I've heard he's done fairly well of late years. No, I can't say I think he's a swindler, and I doubt if he needs anybody else's money to back his horseless carriage's songful mood prevented. He marked how animated Isabel seemed; it was not strange to see his mother so gay, but it was strange that a man not of the family should be the cause of her gaiety. And George sat frowning.

"Well, what's he brought the old thing here for, then? People that own elephants don't take their elephants around with 'em when they go visiting. What's he got it here for?"

"I'm sure I don't know," said Mr. Minnaf, resuming his paper. "You might ask him."

Isabel laughed and patted her husband's shoulder again. "Aren't you going to dress? Aren't we all going to the dance?"

He groaned faintly. "Aren't your brother and Georgie escorts enough for you and Fanny?"

"Wouldn't you enjoy it at all?"

"You know I don't."

Isabel let her hand remain upon his shoulder a moment longer; she stood behind him, looking into the fire, George, watching her broodingly, thought there was more color in her face than the reflection of the flames accounted for. "Well, then," she said indulgently, "stay at home and be happy. We won't urge you if you'd really rather not."

"I really wouldn't," he said contentedly.

Half an hour later George was passing through the upper hall, in a bathrobe stage of preparation for the evening's gayeties, when he encountered his Aunt Fanny. He stopped her. "Look here!" he said.

"What in the world is the matter with you?" she demanded, regarding him with little amiability. "You look as if you were rehearsing for a villain in a play."

His expression gave no sign of yielding to the request; on the contrary, its somberness deepened. "I suppose you don't know why father doesn't want to go tonight," he said.

"He never wants to go anywhere that I ever heard of," said Fanny. "What is the matter with you?"

"He doesn't want to go because he doesn't like this man Morgan. Look here, what makes you and—everybody so excited over him?"

"Excited!" she jeered. "Can't people be glad to see an old friend

"We Won't Urge You If You'd Really Rather Not."

"Without silly children like you having to make a to-do about it? I've just been in your mother's room suggesting that she might give a little dinner for them—"

"For who?"

"For whom, Georgie! For Mr. Morgan and his daughter."

"Look here!" George said quickly.

"Don't do that! Mother mustn't do that. It wouldn't look well."

"Wouldn't look well!" Fanny mocked him; and her suppressed venom betrayed a surprising acerbity. "See here, Georgie Minnaf, I suggest that you just march straight on into your room and finish your dressing! Sometimes you say things that show you have a pretty mean little mind!"

George was so astounded by this outburst that his indignation was delayed by his curiosity. "Why, what upsets you this way?" he inquired.

"I know what you mean," she said, her voice still lowered, but not decreasing in sharpness. "You're trying to insinuate that I'd get your mother to invite Eugene Morgan here on my account because he's a widower!"

"I am?" George gasped, nonplussed. "I'm trying to insinuate that you're setting your cap at him and getting mother to help you? Is that what you mean?"

Beyond a doubt that was what Miss Fanny meant. She gave him a white-hot look. "You attend to your own affairs!" she whispered fiercely, and swept away.

George, dumfounded, returned to his room for meditation.

He had lived for years in the same house with his Aunt Fanny, and it now appeared that during all those years he had been thus intimately associating with a total stranger. Never before had he met the passionate lady with whom he had just held a conversation in the hall. So she wanted to get married! And wanted George's mother to help her with this horseless-carriage widower!

"Well, what's he going to do?" he muttered aloud. "I well—I certainly will be shot." And he began to laugh. "Lord! I'm mighty!"

But presently, at the thought of the horseless-carriage widower's daughter, his grimness returned, and he resolved upon a line of conduct for the evening. He would nod to her carelessly when he first saw her; and after that he would notice her no more: he would not dance with her; he would not favor her in the cotillion—he would not go near her!

He descended to dinner upon the third urgent summons of the colored butler, having spent two hours dressing—and rehearsing.

* * * * *

The Hon. George Amberson was a congressman who led cotillions—the sort of congressman an Amberson would be. He did it negligently tonight, yet with infallible dexterity. Thereafter all cognizance of her evaporated: the curious little outsider was permitted no further existence worth the struggle. Nevertheless she flashed in the corner of his eyes too often. She seemed to be having a "wonderful time!"

An unbearable soreness accumulated in his chest: his dislike of the girl and her conduct increased until he thought of leaving this sickening Assembly and going home to bed. That would show her! But just then he heard her laughing and decided that he wouldn't show her. So he remained.

When the young couples seated themselves in chairs against the walls round three sides of the room for the cotillion George joined a brazen-faced group clustering about the doorway—youths with no partners, yet eligible to be "called out" and favored. He marked that his uncle placed the infernal Kinney and Miss Morgan, as the leading couple, in the first chairs at the head of the line—upon the leader's right; and this disloyalty on the part of Uncle George was inexcusable, for in the family circle the nephew had often expressed his opinion of Fred Kinney. In his bitterness George uttered a significant monosyllable.

The music flourished, whereupon Mr. Kinney, Miss Morgan and six of their neighbors rose and waltzed knowingly. Mr. Amberson's whistle blew; then the eight young people went to the favor table and were given toys and trinkets wherewith to delight the new partners it was now their privilege to select.

George strolled with a bored air to the Tropical grove, where sat his elders, and seated himself beside his Uncle Sydney. His mother leaned across Miss Fanny, raising her voice over the music to speak to him.

"George, nobody will be able to see you here. You'll not be favored. You ought to be where you can dance."

"Don't care to," he returned. "Bore!"

"But you ought—" She stopped and laughed, waving her fan to direct his attention behind him. "Look over your shoulder!"

He turned and discovered Miss

"I Found You!" She Laughed.

Lucy Morgan in the act of offering him a purple toy balloon.

"I found you!" she laughed.

George was startled. "Well—" he said.

"Would you rather 'sit it out'?" Lucy asked quickly as he did not move. "I don't care to dance if you mean."

"No," he said, rising. "It would be better to dance." His tone was solemn, and solemnly he departed with her from the grove. Solemnly he kept this up all night? What do you mean by it?"

For an instant she seemed confused. "That's what cotillions are for, aren't they?" she murmured.

"What do you mean: what they're for?"

"So that a girl can dance with a person she wants to?"

George's huskiness increased. "Well, do you mean you—want to dance with me all the time—all evening?"

"Well, this much of it—evidently!" she laughed.

"Is it because you want to even things up for making me angry—I mean for hurting my feelings on the way home?"

With her eyes averted—for girls of nineteen can be as shy as boys, sometimes—she said, "Well—you only got angry because I couldn't dance the cotillion with you. I—I didn't feel terribly hurt with you for getting angry about that!"

"Was there any other reason? Did my telling you I liked you have anything to do with it?"

She looked up gently and as George met her eyes something exquisitely touching yet queerly delightful gave him a catch in the throat. She looked instantly away, and, turning, ran out from the palm grove, where they stood, to the dancing floor.

"Come on!" she cried. "Let's dance!"

He followed her.

"See here—I—I—" he stammered.

"You mean—Do you—"

"No, no," she laughed. "Let's dance!"

He put his arm about her almost tremulously and they began to waltz. It was a happy dance for both of them.

Christmas day is the children's, but the holidays are youth's dancing time. The holidays belong to the early twenties and the 'teens, home from school and college. It is the liveliest time in life, the happiest of the irresponsible times in life. Mothers echo its happiness—nothing is like a mother who has a son home from college, except another mother with a son home from college. Yet they give up their sons to the daughters of other mothers, and find it proud rapture enough to be allowed to sit and watch.

Thus Isabel watched George and Lucy dancing as together they danced away the holidays of that year, into the past.

"They seem to get along better than they did at first, those two children," Fanny Minnaf said, sitting beside her at the Sharons' dance a week after the Assembly. "They seemed to be always having little quarrels of some sort at first. At least George STOCK BARN—The drive is metal from the barn to the pike; has electric lights, running water in every stall, granary, new platform wagon scales.

Large 20 acres Tobacco Barn. Windmill. All buildings painted and in first class shape. All fences and gates in good repair. Could there be anything else added to make it an ideal country home? You may look the country over and in our judgment you would not find one better.

TRACT NO. 2.—Then we will sell about 60 acres of fine land fronting Tom Garnett's land. 18 acres of fine timber is on this tract. The timber alone would probably be worth $200 to $250 per acre and every foot of this land is good.

TRACT NO. 3.—Then we will offer Tract No. 3 fronting on Casky road and containing about 40 acres. Splendid tobacco barn; newly painted. Holds about 15 acres of tobacco. A barn that would cost about $1,000 to build today. A good small house on this tract and good land.

TRACT NO. 4.—About 50 acres lying on the north side of Bradshaw pike. This piece of land has a very good tenant house on it. Long frontage on the pike. A good piece of land.

TRACT NO. 5.—Will be just across the pike and contains something like 50 acres, lying between Mr. Garnett's land and the pike.

We shall offer this land separately and then as a whole. The way it brings the most is the way it will be sold.

TERMS—One half cash and balance in one, two or three years. A lien retained in deed to secure the deferred payments.

THE 65-ACRE TICHENOR FARM

On above date at 3 p.m. on the premises two (2) miles from Hopkinsville, south on the Dixie Bee Line, we shall sell at Public Outcry what is known as the Tichenor Farm.

65 acres to be sold as a sub-division.

15 acres together with a nice new cottage, beautiful lawn, tenant house, tobacco barn, etc.

Then we shall sell the balance in 10 tracts of 5 acres each, each having a broad frontage on the Dixie Bee Line, or Nashville Pike.

Party purchasing one will have the privilege of taking the one next to it at the same price.

Now this is a splendid location. Close enough to live out there and to work in town.

TERMS—One-third cash; balance in one, two or three years.

NINTH ST. BUSINESS PROPERTY

At 5 p.m. on above date we shall sell at Public Outcry, on Ninth Street, in the city of Hopkinsville, next to L. & N. depot, the brick building fronting 43 feet on Ninth Street, running back full length of square to Tenth Street, and being same building as now occupied as a livery stable.

This would make a splendid garage, wholesale grocery or Mercantile House of any kind. I believe there are as many people passing in front of this property as any property in Hopkinsville.

This building at very little cost could be converted into a Mercantile House. And remember Ninth Street property is THE property.

TERMS—One-third cash; balance one, two or three years.

FARMERS AND MERCHANTS BANK BUILDING PEMPROKE, KY.

On the same date at 5:30, next door to the L. & N. depot, in Hopkinsville, we will sell to the highest bidder, what is known as the Farmers & Merchants Bank building, located on Main street at Pembroke, Ky.

This is a new building and is the best building in the town of Pembroke. It is now bringing an income of over $1500 per annum. The building is not a building in Hopkinsville that is better finished or better built than this building at Pembroke. This building would cost $25,000 to $30,000 to build today, and it is all in good repair and good tenants.

MEN, if you want an investment, it seems to me that you would be interested in this proposition.

TERMS—One-third cash; balance in one, two or three years.

DON'T FORGET THE DAY AND THE DATE WEDNESDAY AUGUST 20, 1819

Sale will begin promptly at 1:30 o'clock; five miles from Hopkinsville on the Bradshaw pike. Thence from there to the Tichenor Farm, two miles from Hopkinsville on the Dixie Bee Line at 3 P.M. Thence from there to the L. & N. depot at Hopkinsville, 5 P.M. we will wind up the sale.

As we have before stated we believe this will be the biggest sale ever held in Western Kentucky. We have made preparations to that effect. ATTORNEY-GENERAL PALMER ANNOUNCES PROSECUTION AS FIRST STEP IN H. C. L.

PROFITEERS ARE SOUGHT FOR

Special Agents Are Unleashed on Trial of Speculators—Sidetrack Everything Else.

Washington, Aug. 6.—Anti-trust suits against the great meat packing firms were announced today by Attorney General Palmer at the first concrete development of the government's campaign to reduce the high cost of living.

Armour, Swift, Morris and Cudahy, who have been pictured in the investigations of the federal trade commissions committee as a great combination in control of food products, are to be haled again before the federal courts by special prosecutors.

The evidence in hand, Attorney-General Palmer declared, indicated "a clear violation of the anti-trust laws."

Whether the prosecution would be civil or criminal, the attorney general declined to state, merely recalling that the law provides for both.

The history of all the government's anti-trust prosecutions in 25 years does not show a single individual ever serving a jail sentence for a violation. There are evidences that the government hopes for some in the present campaign.

CHARGE SUGAR FIRM HEADS WITH PROFITEERING

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 6.—Warrants were issued this afternoon for the arrest of three officers of the Pittsburg branch of the Central Sugar company, of Chicago, charged with profiteering.

The information which was sworn to by a special agent of the department of justice charged that the company during the last two weeks sold sugar at 14 cents a pound wholesale.

FISCAL COURT. The Fiscal Court held its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon and considered many matters.

A contract was awarded to C. W. Lile to build 1 1/4 miles of nine-foot pike, stone to be 9 inches deep, on the lower Greenville road.

$1,000 was given the Littlefield highway, running from Pembroke to Fairview.

Bids were asked for one mile of pike on the Crofton and Greenville road.

All bids submitted for building the abutments for a bridge over the West Fork of McFarland's creek were rejected.

CONGRESSMAN'S MOOD BETRAYED BY CLOTHES

(Detroit News.)

Frequenters of the senatorial press gallery in Washington declare they can always foretell the oratorical plans of Senator Frelinghuysen of New Jersey by the raiment in which that shapely lawmarker is clad. On the days when he plans merely to interject himself into the debate from time to time, he will wear gray, blue, brown, stripes, mixed—whatever in an elaborate wardrobe strikes his fancy, matches the weather or fits his mood. But if the senator has a set speech to make, he will put on the uniform of the orator—frock-coat and gray striped trousers. An exact artist also would include in any portrait of Frelinghuysen, speaking, a pair of glasses on a wide black ribbon, and depict the gentleman from New Jersey in the act of either putting them on, with an eloquent gesture, or taking them off, with equal eloquence.

The apparel of James Hamilton Lewis has been liken to the rainbow, the kaleidoscope, the Easter egg; but in reality Senator Lewis is a conservative dresser. The public has been fooled by the fact that he never wears a waistcoat that matches his suit, and by the masterful manner in which he carries his clothes.

WOODED AND WON WITHIN 2 WEEKS THRU WANT AD

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 5.—Wooed and won in a fortnight thru the medium of a matrimonial "ad" is the experience of pretty Miss Elizabeth Goettel, of Central Square, near this city. Miss Goettel, "just for fun," answered an "ad," "wife wanted," issued by one Bruce Weed, of Lyndon-Wyo., who styled himself a prosperous oil speculator. The customary correspondence was hastened back and forth, photographs were exchanged and the effect on young Weed was so impressive that, without announcing his coming, he hurried eastward to Central Square. There he met the unsuspecting young woman in an ice cream parlor, where she recognized him. Nuptials followed.

CONTINUANCE OF PRESENT WIRE RATES AUTHORIZED

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 8.—An order was entered by the State Railroad Commission authorizing a continuance of the rates now in effect of the Western Union Telegraph company and the Cumberland Telephone company. These rates were made while the companies were under government control.

The commission, in its order, says the increased rates are subject to attack by complaint of citizens at any time. The schedules were put into effect last April.

CONSTIPATION GIVING AWAY

TO REMEDY MADE ROOTS, HERBS, BERRIES AND FLOWERS

Used Centuries Ago

Constipation is slowly disappearing.

Within the past three years more than 8000 cases have been relieved by INDU, the medicine made of roots, barks and berries.

Most kidney and liver trouble is due, medical men say, to this dreaded functional disorder. It causes one to lie awake nights; nervous and sick headaches are the result of constipation, while palpitation of the heart is one of the most noticeable effects of the trouble.

INDU relieves one of that distressing after-eating feeling; it neutralizes uric acid thereby relieving rheumatic pains.

If you want to feel the real joy of living try a single bottle of INDU.

It is unlawful for a druggist to offer a substitute for INDU when INDU is called for.

PRESIDENT TO TAKE STEPS AT ONCE TO REDUCE COSTS OF LIVING

FLOUR DOWN TO $10.00 BARREL

Government To Stand the Loss On Maintaining The Guarantee Price of Wheat.

Washington, D. C., August 7.—President Wilson will take steps to effect the immediate reduction of the price of foodstuffs. Congress will receive a message from him requesting enactment of whatever legislation may be necessary to lower prices. The Department of Justice has been ordered to make war immediately on all hoarders of supplies and all profiteers. Julius H. Barnes has decided to retain the guaranteed price of $2.26 a bushel for wheat in order to prevent the rise of price. Barnes promised a stabilization of flour prices and hopes to be able to supply all that is needed at $10 a barrel.

These decisions were reached today by Government agencies working to reduce the cost of living and allay the country's unrest. President Wilson decided to address a message to Congress recommending additional legislation to aid in reducing the cost of living. Agents of the Department of Justice were ordered to ferret out all hoarders of necessities and profiteers throughout the country. They are to be prosecuted under the food control act.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 8.—Congressman-elect King Swope, who will take his seat in the House next Monday will seek to bring about reform of the court-martial system, he said today before leaving for Louisville.

"There are hundreds of soldiers in prison he said, "who never should have been there. My hopes look to legislation that will prevent a recurrence of the wrongs that have been done."

Mr. Swope also will work toward the elimination of what he called the "red tape that has delayed needlessly the pay of our Kentucky soldiers."

New Map of the World

Outlines Still Far From Perfect

We can get some idea already of the new map of the world, though its outlines are still far from perfect, observes a writer in the Providence Journal. Along Germany's western frontier Alsace-Lorraine goes unconditionally to France, with the Sarre basin also ceded to her for 15 years, the mines of that region given over as partial indemnity to French ownership and a plebiscite 15 years hence provided for. Luxembourg is freed from German control. Belgium gets a small area, part outright and part subject to popular vote, and a plebiscite will determine whether the inhabitants of Schleswig prefer to be included within Germany or Denmark for the future.

Germany will retain nominal control of the valley east of the Rhine, but it is to be permanently demilitarized. German Austria becomes an independent state, along with the new Czechoslovakia, Jugoslavia and Poland. Danzig will be a free city with Polish affiliations and Germany is forced to recognize the new states of western Russia.

In Africa the immense German holdings go to the allied and associated powers as mandatories. Japan agrees to return to the Peking government all the territory on the Chinese mainland which she has lately acquired, but will have Tsingtao in perpetuity. The various German Islands of the Pacific go to Japan, Australia and New Zealand as mandatories, which means that in all human probability those countries will be permanently installed there under the convenient fiction of the League of Nations language. Even the German slice of the Antarctic continent is to be yielded to the Entente. Will it be necessary to give anyone a "mandate" for this frigid and uninhabited region?

There are still so many details to be worked out that it may be some time before the authentic new atlases can be issued.

Washing Poor People's Fest. The custom of washing the feet of the poor on Maundy Thursday at Whitehall was observed by English sovereigns until the end of the seventeenth century. After that the ceremony was performed on their behalf by the Archbishops of York until the middle of the eighteenth century.

Patriotic Air Roused Her. A Quinacy girl returned from a dance recently at about 3 a. m. and could not be awakened for work. The alarm clock had no effect, nor did repeated calls from members of the family. Her little brother tooted the reveille, but the girl was no soldier. Finally "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played, and to that the patriotic girl immediately responded.—Boston Globe.

Remembered Diagnosis. When Sophie was nine years old she was not feeling well and had what she thought a great deal of pain. The doctor was called and he said: "Oh, you're all right; those pains are just growing pains." A few days later a friend of the family called and inquired of Sophie how she was feeling. "Oh," she said, "I am better, but still growing."

Length of Lobsters. Whatever may be the excellent intent of the bill filed in the Massachusetts legislature reducing the length of lobsters that may be legally taken from 9 to 8 inches, the measure might well be entitled a bill to further the extermination of the lobster. The lobster is rapidly disappearing, partly, at any rate, because young and immature specimens are permitted by law to be caught. The present 8 inches in this state is shorter than the Maine law allows—and that is none too long.—Boston Post.

Japanese Conjugal Etiquette. When American people judge the degree of affection between a Japanese husband and wife by their conduct to each other they make a great mistake. It would be as bad form for a man to express approval of his wife or children as it would be for him to praise any other part of himself, and every wife takes a pride in conducting herself according to the rigid rules of etiquette, which recognize dignity and humility as the virtues that reflect greatest glory on the home of which she is mistress.

The First National Bank

Justice Of Columbia's Claim.

(Springfield Republican.)

The latent possibilities of harmony between the Republicans of the Senate and the Democratic administration are revealed in the agreement to put through the treaty by which the United States undertakes to pay $25,000,000 in damages to Columbia for the loss of the isthmus of Panama in the first Roosevelt administration. It is not necessary to review the incident of 1903 in order to rejoice over the final settlement of an ugly controversy which for years has weakened our government's moral influence throughout Latin-America.

The so-called regret clause in the treaty, which was offensive to the late Mr. Roosevelt and his friends, has been eliminated with the consent of Columbia; but Columbia wins a clear victory because the payment to her of $25,000,000 is a distinct recognition by the United States of the justice of her claim. The United States never could have afforded to deny Columbia's right to fair compensation particularly after refusing to submit the question of damages to arbitration. The seizure of the Isthmus might be justified as an act of force dictated by superior necessity, but, unless it was followed by compensation to the dispossessed nation, such performance must be condemned as spoilage of the weak by the strong. From this stain upon the national honor the pending treaty will save us.

The former administration of President Taft deserves some of the credit for the settlement now at hand, inasmuch as Mr. Knox was the first of the secretaries of state to concede to Columbia the principle of compensation. The Wilson administration has striven to bring the long negotiations to a successful issue. To the Senate, also, congratulations, if the treaty now receives its prompt and favorable attention.

In Trouble and Illness Follow, Solomon's Advice

Indu Will Renew Your Strength to Overcome Your Ailments and Fight the Battle of Life

"IF THOU FAINTEST IN THE DAY OF ADVERSITY. THY STRENGTH IS SMALL." (Prov. 24:10.)

Have you noticed how easily most men become discouraged at the least reverses?

And women, too, are inclined to give us hope when apparently unsurmountable obstacles are met in their life paths.

Solomon hit the nail on the head when he wrote in his proverbs: "If thou faintest in the days of adversity thy strength is small."

The men and women who are successful in life are those who resolve to fight the harder under reverses and who grit their teeth when they are confronted with removing obstacles to their success.

This holds true in cases of ailment. Most people either become discouraged or neglectful when they find no improvement after trying medical treatment and all sorts of remedies.

Don't lose courage when it seems to you that you cannot get over your constipation, or kidney and liver trouble, sick and nervous headaches or rheumatism.

Indu lies your hope. You will find relief for the ailments mentioned. It also will prove a boon in cases of gas on the stomach, improper digestion and weak and dizzy spells. Indu will give you strength to fight the battle of life under all sorts of adversity.

BLACK NAMES 12 TO PROBE HIGH COST OF LIVING

Former Mayor W. O Head To Be Chairman, Two Women Among Appointees.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 5.—Gov. Jas. D. Black late this afternoon appointed a commission of twelve Kentuckians, two of whom are women, to investigate the already unreasonably high and constantly increasing cost of living.

Naming former Mayor W. O. Head of Louisville, chairman, the Governor, in a proclamation announcing creation of the commission, urges the members to assemble immediately, probably in the State Capital, and begin the investigation.

Although some of the Governor's appointees will not know of their selection until they see the newspapers Wednesday, it is assumed by the Governor that they will accept.

The twelve appointees are:

W. O. Head, Louisville, chairman.
Fred M. Sackett, formerly Federal Food Administrator for Jefferson county.

M. B. Kendrick, Louisville.
Mrs. Charles P. Weaver, Louisville.

Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, Frankfort.

B. M. Hieatt, Midway.
R. G. Wells, Pikeville.
W. C. Montgomery, Elizabethtown.
Judge W. F. Hall, Harlan county.
Capt. J. Frank Hawn, Barbourville.

Ab Mercer, Martwick, Muhlenberg county.

W. G. Duncan, Greenville.
The Governor, in his proclamation, says, in part:

"The high cost of living is the really big problem of today, and lies very close to the unrest of the hour.

The situation is indeed serious. There is no good reason, as I believe, to justify the enormous prices the people are being forced to pay for necessities, such as clothing and foodstuffs.

"I have the impression that there exist combines whose purpose has been and is to monopolize distribution of essentials which enter into needs of the people, and I know the people out to be liberated from all such injustice.

"If there is the unjust profiteer, his manipulations should be thwarted so that the common people may be saved from his wrongs.

"In order that the source and cause of the evil may be located and proper means worked out to remove such evil, I have thought it proper to appoint a commission to investigate the situation, and to suggest some remedies as such investigation may demand and justify.

"And I request that all Commonwealth and County Attorneys of the State assist the commission in the performance of the work in hand."

Memorial To Good Indian

to three survivors, fifteen lives were sacrificed by the cruel rifle and scalping knife of the Indians of Black Hawk's bloodthirsty band. Thirty years after the massacre, William Munson who married one of the three women who escaped the wrath of the red men, erected a monument to the memory of the victims, which cost $700. This memorial still stands. In subsequent years, the patriotic residents of La Salle county launched a campaign in behalf of a larger monument. The legislature finally passed a bill appropriating $5,000 for the purpose and the county set aside a tract of seven acres as a memorial park to be known as Shabbona. This monument is sixteen feet in height. It also commemorates the deeds of Shabbona, chief of the Potowatamies, who was a staunch friend of the whites, and who was the Paul Revere of the Mississippi valley.

Shabbona's Faithfulness.

After attending a war dance in Lee county in May, 1832, called by Black Hawk to launch a campaign of extermination against the white settlers, Shabbona and his son, declining to participate, and warning Black Hawk of the consequences, stole away to sound the note of warning. They determined to save as many as possible from the torture and tragic death that would be the fate of all in the path of the avengers. Turning their back upon their own race forever, realizing that their act would be regarded as traitorous, Shabbona and his son went from log cabin to cabin, warning the settlers to flee for their lives. Many heeded the warning and hastened to the fort near Ottowaway, while others went to Fort Dearborn, now the site of Chicago. Most of the settlers respected the warning of the old chief and his son as they hastened down the Illinois valley, but a few laughed at his words and remained. In Kendall county, the horse ridden by Shabbona fell dead but he was given another by George

Benedict Arnold of his race to save the lives of his white friends.

The act of Shabbona was the more remarkable from the fact that he was band expected. In addition to the fifteen settlers who were murdered by the British troops against the American colonists. At the battle of the Thames when the great chief Tecumseh fell, Shabbona was second in command. When peace was declared, Shabbona vowed he would never raise his tomahawk against the white again and he kept his word.

State Is Aroused.

The raid of Black Hawk aroused the entire State and a small army was organized to destroy the band. Abraham Lincoln was one of the volunteers. The Indians were driven across the Mississippi river into Iowa and returned to Illinois no more.

Shabbona, who was born in 1775, erected a cabin near Seneca after the massacre and was given kindly treatment by the white men for his friendly warning. He died in 1859 and was buried in Evergreen cemetery at Morris in Grundy county. In 1903, a huge boulder was placed over the grave. Many men, prominent in public life of the State, attending the unveiling and delivered addresses eulogizing the memory of the great chief who was willing to become the

ADMINISTRATION IDEA OF PERMANENT PEACE

TO HAVE POWERFUL RESERVE

To Be Made Up of Men Who Have Seen Several Months' Service At Age of 19.

Washington, Aug. 6.—Maintenance of one field army with a war strength of 1,250,000 men is proposed by a bill establishing a permanent military policy, which was sent to Congress yesterday by Secretary Baker.

The active force of this army would be 510,000 regulars, while the remainder would be young men who had taken a three months' military training course, which would be compulsory for the 19-year-old youths.

This reserve strength would be used to fill out the twenty infantry divisions and one cavalry division into which it is proposed to divide the regular army.

Under the measure all special service built up during the war would be maintained as separate branches except the chemical warfare service.

NO ANARCHY IN FORD'S VIEWS

BISHOP WILLIAMS TESTIFIES IN THE $1,000,000 LIBEL CASE AGAINST TRIBUNE.

WON'T TELL "HALF-TRUTHS"

Noted Divine Says If Manufacturer's Theories Are Anarchistic Then He Is In Danger Of Becoming Anarchist Himself.

Mt. Clemens, Mich.—The Chicago Tribune rested its defense in the $1,000,000 libel suit which Henry Ford has brought against it after spending seven weeks and two days in attempting to prove that it was justified in calling the manufacturer an "anarchist." The 12th week of the trial opened with Ford counsel offering rebuttal testimony against The Tribune's defense.

The first witness for Mr. Ford was the Rt. Rev. Charles D. Williams, D. D., Episcopal bishop of Michigan, who appeared on the stand in rebuttal of the testimony of Prof. J. S. Reeves, professor of political science in the University of Michigan who had previously testified that Henry Ford's views were distinctly anarchistic.

Bishop Williams said that Mr. Ford's views were far from being anarchistic and were, in fact, Christian, common and often commonplace.

The Bishop refused to be led by Tribune counsel in his answers and insisted on telling "the whole truth." Asked whether he thought Henry Ford's declaration that all armies should be disbanded, all navies destroyed and all material of war converted into commercial implements was anarchistic, the witness answered:

Would Be Good World.

"I could quote a half-dozen passages from Scripture that express almost that idea. I should say that the main theme of these statements by Henry Ford are distinctly Christian, commonly preached in Christian pulpits and that if they were lived up to this would be a pretty good Christian world."

"Bishop," asked Tribune counsel, "do you believe that Mr. Ford has quoted, 'patriotism is the last resort of a scoundrel'?"

"I have often said so," responded the witness. "I have often seen it so." Concerning the doctrine of non-resistance Bishop Williams declared he did not believe in such a theory but that many Christians did.

"It is the belief of anarchists," said Tribune counsel.

"Yes and the belief of Christians."

"Will you be good enough to answer the question," retorted counsel.

"Anarchists say that and Christians say that. I am afraid I am going to tell the whole truth."

"Now Bishop—"

Would Tell Whole Truth.

"I am going to tell the whole truth."

"You are telling something I have not asked you to tell."

"You have not asked me for the whole truth. I have to follow my conscience. I am a simple man."

"I am afraid," continued the Bishop, "that if this is anarchism I agree with it mostly."

Ford counsel then called William A. Dunning, professor of history and political philosophy in Columbia University, to testify concerning Mr. Ford's theories and utterances.

"When Henry Ford," said counsel, "said that we should stop talking about one factory, one state and one country and begin to talk about the world, was he preaching the doctrine of anarchism?"

"No that is the general thought of cosmopolitanism—human inclusiveness; it has permeated all speculation on political philosophy ever since there was such a philosophy."

"Is there anything peculiarly anarchistic about it?"

"No."

"Is it in any way essential to anarchism?"

"No."

"Mr. Ford also said that he believed humanity could make mistakes but could do nothing worse; he said he believed everything tended toward the good, and that even the terrible world war would result in blessing to the world. Is there anything anarchistic about those ideas?"

"They were commonplace before an anarchist was ever heard of. The idea that man is naturally good is the basis of Plato's morals. It has permeated moral philosophy ever since."

Prof. Dunning was then asked to run through the articles and interviews sponsored by Henry Ford and indicate the portions which would convince a critical examiner that Mr. Ford was not an anarchist.

The witness promptly pointed out numerous references to the government and to the use of the ballot which showed, he said, that Mr. Ford believed in the orderly processes of government and therefore could not be an anarchist. In no writing or interview, he said, could he find a single indication that Mr. Ford was an anarchist, either in the common or philosophical conception of that term.

Baby Natural Monopolist.

There is about the baby none of the subtle deceitfulness of the old, practiced bore who deftly turns the conversation to his own exploits and affairs. Baby simply takes off the muffler from his personal self. The entire household attention turns at once to his affairs. He monopolizes the conversation with his breathless account of his hunger or of his connection with the open safety pin—and that is all there is to it.

Advice Soldiers Need Not Take.

Sergeant, the French for which is sergeant, the Italian sergente, comes from the medieval Latin word sergens, meaning a servant, a vassal, or a vassal soldier who seems to have acted as an orderly or striker. Tell this to your sergeant some warm day when he criticizes your appearance on parade in his coarse, unfeeling manner. It will soften him. It may even melt him.—New York Evening Post.

Japanese Taught to Repress Emotion.

Until late years the repression of any appearance of strong emotion was carefully drilled into the mind and life of every Japanese child of the better class. There is much more freedom now than formerly, but the influence of past training is seen everywhere—in art, in literature, on the stage and in the customs of daily life. Artists paint the autumn moon, which every Japanese adores, but he wraps the brilliant disk within a veil of cloud.
